ABSTRACT

Compiled at a 1-week institute held at Oregon State University in June 1969, this bibliography has four major sections: (1) an alphabetized listing of sources of materials including the names and addresses of the organizations and the major subject areas of concern, (2) an alphabetized listing of materials arranged by title and including source or publisher, author, format, date, price, and subject, (3) a listing of addresses of publishers and other sources of materials on the alphabetized listing above, and (4) an alphabetized listing of sources of nonprint materials. Subject categories include: (1) aeronautics, (2) agriculture, (3) apprenticeship, (4) automation, (5) automotive, (6) carpentry, (7) civil engineering, (8) construction, (9) drafting, (10) electronics, (11) food services, (12) forestry, (13) health occupations, (14) horticulture, (15) law enforcement, (16) machine shop, (17) marine technology, (18) marketing, (19) middle management, (20) new programs, (21) office practice, (22) radio/television, and (23) welding. PREFACE

This bibliography, reproduced here in preliminary form, resulted from a one-week institute, Library Materials for Vocational-Technical Programs in Community Colleges, which was held at Oregon State University June 16-20, 1969. Funded as a Higher Education Act Institute by the U. S. Office of Education, the institute was sponsored by the School of Librarianship, University of Oregon; the Library, Oregon State University; the Division of Vocational, Adult, and Community College Education, School of Education, Oregon State University; and the Learning Resources Center, Lane Community College.

The bibliography is being reproduced at this time and in this form to provide a starting point for further revision by the participants in the institute and by others who may cooperate to make this listing of materials appropriate for vocational and technical fields in community colleges a more extensive and better bibliography. With the resources of the library at Oregon State University and with numerous exhibit materials available to them, the participants in the institute selected areas of the curriculum which were their special concerns and sought materials which helped to serve these areas. Time was short but well used; there was no opportunity for checking or re-checking of bibliographic entries in a library collection; participants sometimes felt circumscribed and sometimes overwhelmed by the task and the assignments they had taken on. To these causes may be attributed any shortcomings of the bibliography. They certainly are not due to any lack of effort or cooperation on the part of the compilers. One hoped-for result was that the experience of gathering material would be professionally rewarding to the institute participants, of whom most were librarians, but among whom were included administrators and other faculty members. This intangible and immeasurable result may have been achieved in spite of any shortcomings noted here.

There are four major sections of this bibliography:

1) an alphabetized listing of sources of materials. These include associations, commercial firms, and others. While many are included in more comprehensive listings, the compilers included these because of their special relevance to the curricular areas with which they were concerned. In most instances, included here are the name, full address, and major subject area with which the association or agency is concerned. When several subject areas are included in the agency's concerns, indicating they are quite general, none is listed. Here and elsewhere in the bibliography, information is given in a form which may be easily replicated for use on mailing labels or other reference forms.

2) an alphabetized listing of materials. Arranged by title for ease of checking with order files, card catalogs, etc., and with recognition of the fact that these materials are variously cataloged by author, agency, or series, these materials include print and nonprint items. Information given includes the source or publisher, author, format if other than book, physical characteristics relating to format, date, price, and subject. A note in this preface provides further information about designation of subject and physical characteristics. In instances where information is missing, it either was not available to the compiler or (rarely) was not decipherable. As with the listing described above, where a title served several fields or was quite general in scope, no subject was assigned.

3) an alphabetized partial listing of publishers and other sources. When items provided for the alphabetized listing of materials included complete information or addresses for the source, these were included in this separate listing, rather than included in the list of materials. The purpose was to eliminate repetition and to make the list of sources easily accessible for the user. In every instance, entries in this list refer back to entries for publishers and sources as given in the alphabetized listing of materials.

4) alphabetized listing of sources of nonprint materials prepared separately by one institute participant. Adapted and updated from an earlier listing, this is a reference to publishers and other suppliers of nonprint materials who are not included in either of the foregoing lists of sources.

To the user, it may seem confusing or even ridiculous to have these several separate listings. To the editor, it seemed most helpful to arrange them in this fashion. The third or partial listing is really only a way of providing further information needed for use of the list of materials. In general, sources included in the first listing are the most standard ones to which community colleges might write to request free materials and information about other materials. One reason for separating the last of these lists is that it applies only to nonprint media; another reason is that since it was hastily updated for this publication, addresses and titles may not be as accurate as those listed elsewhere.

Subject categories designated for materials and sources were based on the curricular areas in which institute participants were most interested, as polled in advance, in locating materials. These are:

AERONAUTICS	DRAFTING	MARINE TECHNOLOGY
AGRICULTURE	ELECTRONICS	MARKETING
APPRENTICESHIP	FOOD SERVICES	MIDDLE MANAGEMENT
AUTOMATION	FORESTRY	NEW PROGRAMS
AUTOMOTIVE	HEALTH OCCUPATIONS	OFFICE PRACTICE
CARPENTRY	HORTICULTURE	RADIO/TV
CIVIL ENGINEERING	LAW ENFORCEMENT	WELDING
CONSTRUCTION	MACHINE SHOP

Most of these designations should be clear; the phrase, NEW PROGRAMS, was adopted as a kind of catch-all designation for various new and emerging areas of the curriculum in which participants were interested. In practice, it was little used.

Since all of the participants in the institute were from the Pacific Northwest or West Coast states, they often indicated sources within those states. Users of this bibliography in other areas should keep in mind that their own states or regions may have departments or branches which may be used as sources instead.

In most cases, more information was presented by the institute participants than could be compiled in this preliminary listing. It had been hoped that the use of a computer could permit using all the information about purchase priority, placement within the library, and other points, but this was not possible. The two forms used by participants appear before the bibliography.

Most abbreviations and shortened forms used are undoubtedly familiar to users of this bibliography, but two listings of them appear following the preface. One is the standard listing of two-letter abbreviations for names of states as recommended by the U. S. Post Office, and the other is a listing of abbreviations used in addresses and other parts of the entries. Also in the interest of conciseness, prices given for periodicals are for annual subscriptions, although this is not repeated for each entry.

Other information about this bibliography and possible plans for its revision, enlargement, or availability will be available upon request to:

Dr. Perry D. Morrison, Professor
School of Librarianship
University of Oregon
Eugene, Oregon 97403

Dr. Morrison was the director of this institute; his vision and leadership were its two greatest strengths. If the phrase, "singularly enriching and educational experience" were not overworked, I would say that that is what working with him and the participants in this institute was. As it is, I can only describe it as unique and fun. The final editing of this bibliography has been my responsibility and I trust it does justice to the efforts and interest of those who made it possible.
